INTRODUCTION

Before tutors and students can begin planning lessons, goals need to be set according to those expressed by the student and his/her existing level of English. Once the goals have been set (to gain employment, to be able to shop independently, to be able to communicate with their children's teachers, etc.) then the planning can begin.

This packet (1 of 10) has been developed to assist tutors in creating lessons that will help students in a practical manner in their every-day life. Life skills are listed under each topic or subject with ideas for practice activities. The use of real-life material, e.g. actual application forms, the telephone directory, the newspaper, in the lesson provides the student an opportunity to practice in a safe, non-threatening environment. Some examples of real-life material are included.

To give the tutor and the student satisfaction that progress is being made toward the goals, an Achievement Log has been developed. The log is for the recording by the student of those accomplishments achieved beyond and outside the lesson time. It might be that your student can now make phone calls, help a child with homework, write a note or fill out an application form. An awareness of these changes will motivate your student to set the next goals.

RADIO, NEWSPAPER, AND TV

Here are some life skills that can be used as the basis for a lesson with suggestions for practice activities.

1. Find, read, and understand information regarding radio stations listed in the newspaper and other publications.

Suggestions: Together with the learner bring a variety of publications to the lesson. Identify words that the learner needs to know to find information about radio stations.

2. Listen to and understand the weather and/or news on the radio.

Suggestions: Discuss the words that are necessary for the learner to understand the weather. Circle weather related words in the newspaper. Together discuss an item on the weather report or news. Tape a report if the learner finds it difficult to follow. Ask the student to keep a weather journal for one week.

3. Read a newspaper that has appropriate vocabulary for your student, e.g. News for You, Chicago Tribune, Chicago Sun Times, Naperville Sun, Aurora Beacon News, The Herald.

Suggestions: Practice reading different articles. Use headlines, advertisements, photographs, cartoons, graphics and other parts of the newspaper to develop reading comprehension. (See pages 10-12).

4. Understand the different sections of a newspaper.

Suggestions: Together bring in a variety of papers. Find and examine the different sections of the newspaper. Have the student do a scavenger hunt for different parts of the newspaper, e.g. classified ads, letters to the editor, sports news, political cartoon, recipes, weather map, advice column, etc. (See pages 7-9, 13).

5. Find specific information in the newspaper, e.g. housing, employment, entertainment, weather, current events.

Suggestions: Using the paper as a source of information plan a weekend of fun leisure activities, or a vacation requiring hotel or motel reservations. Depending on the learner's need, use the paper as a source of information, e.g. housing, employment, classified ads, etc.

6. Understand abbreviations in ads.

Suggestions: Select those abbreviations that are relevant to the learner's needs. Read and discuss a variety of ads.

7. Read and understand a newspaper article or select and discuss a picture from the paper.

Suggestions: Encourage your learner to bring any articles or pictures to the lesson that are of interest to them. Read the articles together, discuss any words that the learner does not understand, and then write some sentences summarizing the article. Discuss the picture and any words that are new to the learner. Together write a sentence or two about the picture. (See page 12).

8. Write a letter to the editor of a newspaper.

Suggestions: Read and discuss letters written to the editor of a local newspaper and what information should be included in the letter. Choose a topic that is important to the student and practice writing a letter.

9. Find, read, and understand information regarding TV channels in the newspaper and other publications such as TV Guide or cable directories.

Suggestions: Together discuss favorite programs and look them up in the TV listings.

10. Watch, listen, and understand the weather and/or news on TV.

Suggestions: Tape a TV program that is of interest. Watch the program together and center a discussion around it. Write a few sentences about the program.

11. Understand what cable TV is and how to order it.

Suggestions: Practice a call to order cable TV. Read and understand any contracts that must be signed.

Activities for Building Vocabulary

Scavenger/Treasure Hunt: Make a list of words relating to the topic being studied, e.g. food, furniture, dictionary terms, etc. and ask the student to find them as you follow along, or if feasible, bring the objects to you. Variation: Say the word and ask the student to write the word on a Post-It Note and attach it to the located object.

Scrabble Game. Distribute the Scrabble tiles as directed by the game. Ask the student to spell out any word he/she can with these pieces. Play and score as in regular Scrabble as you and the student compete for points. Variation: Have student throw a die to determine how many tiles can be picked from all the tiles on the table and used to form words.

Reading Numbers. Create a deck of cards consisting of one digit on each card. Shuffle and lay down three cards, for example 352, and read the number aloud. Ask student to place one card next to any of the three digits and then read aloud the resulting number. For example, placing a 4 next to the first card results in “four hundred fifty-two.” Placing a 4 next to the second card results in “three thousand four hundred fifty-two.” Variation: Place a dollar sign to the left and include a decimal.¹

Board Game. Trace around a quarter to form a series of circles across the top, bottom, and both sides of a sheet of paper. Write a vocabulary word inside each circle. Ask student to roll a die and move his/her marker (button or penny) that many spaces and then say a sentence using the word on which he/she landed. Variation: Play the same way but student asks a question using the word landed on.²

Dictation. Select or compose a short story or passage containing vocabulary words studied. Dictate the story. Provide the student with a printed version of the story with lines representing words omitted. Ask the student to listen to the story and write in the missing words on the lines provided as the dictation is given. Gauge the number of missing words according to the ability of the student—provide a small number for beginners and a larger number for more advanced students. Variation: Record the story on a tape so the student can do it as homework and can listen to the tape as often as needed.

Strip Story. For beginning students, write each sentence that makes up a short story on strips of paper. For more advanced students write the main events that make up a story on strips of paper, one event to each strip. Read the story to the student or ask the student to read it. Ask the student to arrange the strips of paper in the proper order of the story.

Concentration. Write matching pairs of vocabulary words on cards, e.g. holidays and the dates, antonyms, synonyms, idioms, etc. Place the cards face down on the table. Student turns over one card and tries to find the matching card. If cards match, they are left on the table face up. If cards do not match, both cards are turned over and two more cards are selected. Game continues until all cards have been turned over. Variation: Play this game with two or more students.

Using Newspapers for Tutoring

Photographs and pictures

- Match photos with vocabulary.
- Match photos with sentences describing them.
- Make a collage of a continuing news story.
- Compare photos from different newspapers covering the same story.
- Match photos with captions.
- Match photos with headlines.
- Use small pictures to make flashcards for vocabulary (look in supplements).

Headlines

- Write a headline for a story.
- Examine the differences between headlines and normal sentences.
- Convert headlines into sentences.
- Compare headlines from different newspapers covering the same story.

Advertisements

- Look at the abbreviations used in the classified ads. Re-write ads in full words/sentences.
- Write a classified ad according to the guidelines given in the paper.
- Discuss the “slant” of an ad: Who is the ad meant to appeal to? How? Is it successful?
- Have student skim for particular information in an ad: How much does it cost? Where can you buy it? When is the sale over?
- Compare ads for similar products. Discuss which ads seem more appealing.
- Discuss name brand products vs. house brands, costs, and smart shopping. Look at coupons.

Reading Comprehension

- Read articles and then retell or rewrite them.
- Look for who, what, when, why, where.
- Compare an article in English with an article on the same subject in student’s native language.

Graphics

- TV guide: skim for particular shows on certain days and times; particular movie names, particular sports teams, etc.
- TV guide: discuss movie rating system (G, PG, etc.) and recommendation system (stars).
- Look at graphs and charts to locate information quickly.
- Weather map: vocabulary, map skills.
- Use graphs to practice math.

Food Section

- Use recipes to teach American measuring system and cooking vocabulary.
- Discuss and compare American food to food from another country.
- Share recipes with each other.
- Make a mock shopping list based on food advertisements.

Culture

- Read a Dear Abby question. Write an answer. Compare to Abby's answer.
- Same for Miss Manners.
- Read travel tips in travel section.
- Many articles in the "Lifestyle" or "Family" sections have to do with American culture. Read and discuss.
- Plan an outing (real or mock) after reading about upcoming cultural events in the "Weekend" or "Arts" section. Have student call for information. Look at a map to see where to go. Plan transportation and other costs.
- Letters to the editor: read a letter and an article on the same issue; write a letter to the editor.

Cartoons

- White out the words and write your own.
- Discuss why a cartoon is funny or not.
- Some cartoons make political or social comments. Read and discuss.
- Role play a cartoon dialogue.
- Cut apart the cartoon boxes, mix them up, and have student put them in order.

Minority Farmers on the Rise

Neng Fong fled the Southeast Asian nation of Laos more than 20 years ago. Now he grows Asian vegetables such as bok choy and Chinese broccoli on 10 acres in California. Fong leases the land from another local farmer. He dreams of owning his own farm someday. "My life depends on farming," he said.

Fong and many other Hmong people fled their country for political reasons. In the U.S. some turned to farming because they knew how to make a living from it. According to the 1997 U.S. farm census, about 11,075 California farms are owned or run by minority farmers. That's an increase from 9,680 in 1992.

Hispanics are the largest group of minority farmers in California. There are 4,515 of them. In addition, 3,408 Asians own or run farms in the state. There are 277 black farmers.

Nationwide, the number of minority farmers rose from 64,443 in 1992 to 75,375 in 1997.

Many minorities see farming as a way to make hard work pay off, said Joe Miller. He works for the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

FARMER Neng Fong pulls weeds in a field of onions in Fresno, California.

"If they work hard, they can get ahead," Miller said.

Still, language and discrimination have presented problems.

In California, officials are tailoring programs to help certain groups of farmers. The University of California Cooperative Extension Office has hired a Hmong farm adviser. He will help

Hmong growers produce and sell their crops.

The Fresno County Farm Bureau plans to print its materials in Hmong and Spanish.

"We're the ones missing out by not having the information in their language," said Mandy Littlejohn. She works for Fresno County's farm bureau.

Pablo Rizzo juggles for drivers in Buenos Aires, Argentina, June 3. He is part of a group of young people who make a living as street performers. They live and train together in a rundown warehouse. They work as jugglers, clowns, and acrobats.
